Michael Pratt

Born and raised in Langley, Michael has been passionate about community involvement and service since his early teens. Along with his sister, he was responsible for the creation of the “Walk to Remember” at the Derek Doubleday Arboretum. It’s the only memorial of its kind in Canada, with 162 trees being planted to represent the Canadian soldiers who fell during the war in Afghanistan. As a young person, Michael feels compelled to be involved in helping to ensure Langley is built responsibly and with meaningful community engagement. He strongly believes that all generations should work together to make the best decisions possible, and with a proven track record of community involvement and public service he knows that he can be an important voice for all of Langley’s residents. No matter the issue, Michael will be a Councillor who will listen to you and work with you in finding a solution.
